General Dynamics unit to assist local software firm

The Business Journal of Phoenix - 10:31 AM MST Thursday

General Dynamics workers in Scottsdale will help grow nFocus Software.

The woman-owned provider of training management and tracking software has signed a contract with General Dynamics C4 Systems to get assistance in winning and delivering on more government contracts.

The contract qualifies under the U.S. Department of Defense Mentor-Protégé program, which allows large companies to help small businesses better compete for government contracts.

That help can include providing developmental assistance in software development, contract management, business and proposal development, as well as financial and security management.

nFocus Software's Web-based training system is embedded in public sector tracking programs in virtually every major U.S. city. Its KidTrax Membership Management System is the largest record-keeping system for children participating in youth and after-school programs.

General Dynamics C4 Systems designs and manufactures secure communication and information systems. It is a unit of Falls Church, Va.-based defense contractor General Dynamics (NYSE: GD).
